

Beat the Screen

Most of us use our phones in bed sometimes, but this can become a nightly habit that's hard to break. If you're regularly staying up late on your screen and feeling tired the following day, it's time to make some changes.

Using the checklist:

1. Tick everything you are already doing (you're bound to be getting some things right already).
2. Pick two things from the 'I'm going to try this' list to work on.
3. Pick things you can change quickly and easily in order to start improving your sleep straight away.

Sleep Tip	I'm great at this already	I'm going to try this
1. I have a plan for beating the screen Making a plan when you're well-slept will help you beat the screen at bedtime when you're tired and your defences are low.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
2. I make it harder for myself to check my phone at night Creating simple barriers like charging your phone away from your bed will make you less likely to check it during the night.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
3. I have a social media or gaming 'curfew' with friends It can feel like we're missing out when our friends are online and we're not. Agreeing a time when you'll all be offline means you won't be missing out.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
4. I don't rely on my phone to help me relax before bed Using your phone in bed can be relaxing and distract you from intrusive thoughts, but it shouldn't be your only strategy. Find other things that work for you e.g. breathing exercises, reading.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
5. I do a final social media check at night This can help us feel like we're up-to-date, and can quit for the night.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
6. I avoid getting into a state of 'flow' Flow is that feeling you get when you are so engrossed in an activity that you don't notice time passing. At bedtime avoid apps that get you into a state of flow.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
7. I have told people about my Beat the Screen plan Telling other people what you plan to do makes you more likely to do it!	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>